SPENCER GRAY / LIVE MUSIC

AFTER IMAGE

A COMPANION TO NO FIXED PATH / 01

After the sound, something stays.

A hand at the microphone. The distance between the stage and the room. A face appearing for a moment inside the light.

This edit follows the changes of attention inside live music: from the collective energy of a room to the small gesture that makes a performance feel human. Drawn from Spencer Gray's concert albums, it moves between early archive photographs and more recent finished edits.

A different kind of instrument: the image moving behind the performer.

You leave the room. The light stays.

A photograph cannot keep the sound. It can hold the way a room looked while everyone was inside it.

Photographs: Spencer Gray.

Selected from Photos albums including BEST of CONCERTS, Concert edits, concert portfolios and dedicated performer albums. Artist names follow archive metadata. Unidentified performers remain unnamed.

Two Dijon photographs also appear in No Fixed Path v2. Existing finished edits are retained. Page 20 uses a smaller cached source at a resolution-preserving print size.

Companion edition 01 / October 2026.
