SPENCER GRAY / PERSONAL ARCHIVE

After the Turn

CALIFORNIA / ARIZONA
WINTER INTO SPRING, 2024

A PHOTO DIARY / 2024

A year begins.
A room fills.
Life opens.

The road, a birthday, friends.
Nights that changed the color of things.
Long days outside.
And somewhere in the middle of it, love.

A sequence from the personal archive of Spencer Gray.
Winter–spring 2024. Arranged by feeling.
Words adapted from Spencer's recollections.
Portraits and shared photographs: individual camera credits unknown.

A passenger, held close

Room for everyone.

The beginning of a year.
The people who made it bright.

The Lafayette

A couch before the night begins

Fringe, flowers, warm light

Three friends after dark

At the bar

An arm around a friend

Two friends on the couch

A red balloon in a green room

Everyone in one frame

A room for a birthday

The room keeps moving

One more together

Together outside in the red light

The room becomes color

Two friends, one night

The ordinary starts glowing.

Some nights made the familiar feel new.

Light across the room

Color across the ceiling

A small room, another atmosphere

The night overhead / The stars, from the yard

A trail in the flashlight beam

A small sign in the dark

Electric blue, a blanket, the night / A second look beside the pool

Wide awake.
Wide open.

Golf, long light, the desert.
Finding a rhythm in being outside.

A familiar walking companion

A visitor beneath the palms

The green scene

Early light on the course

A pause on the course

Palms against the evening

Weather moving over the course

The sky meets itself

Then, closer.

The best part of an adventure
is who you get to share it with.

A morning at the beach

On the grass before the music

The stage in daylight

Leon Bridges in Phoenix

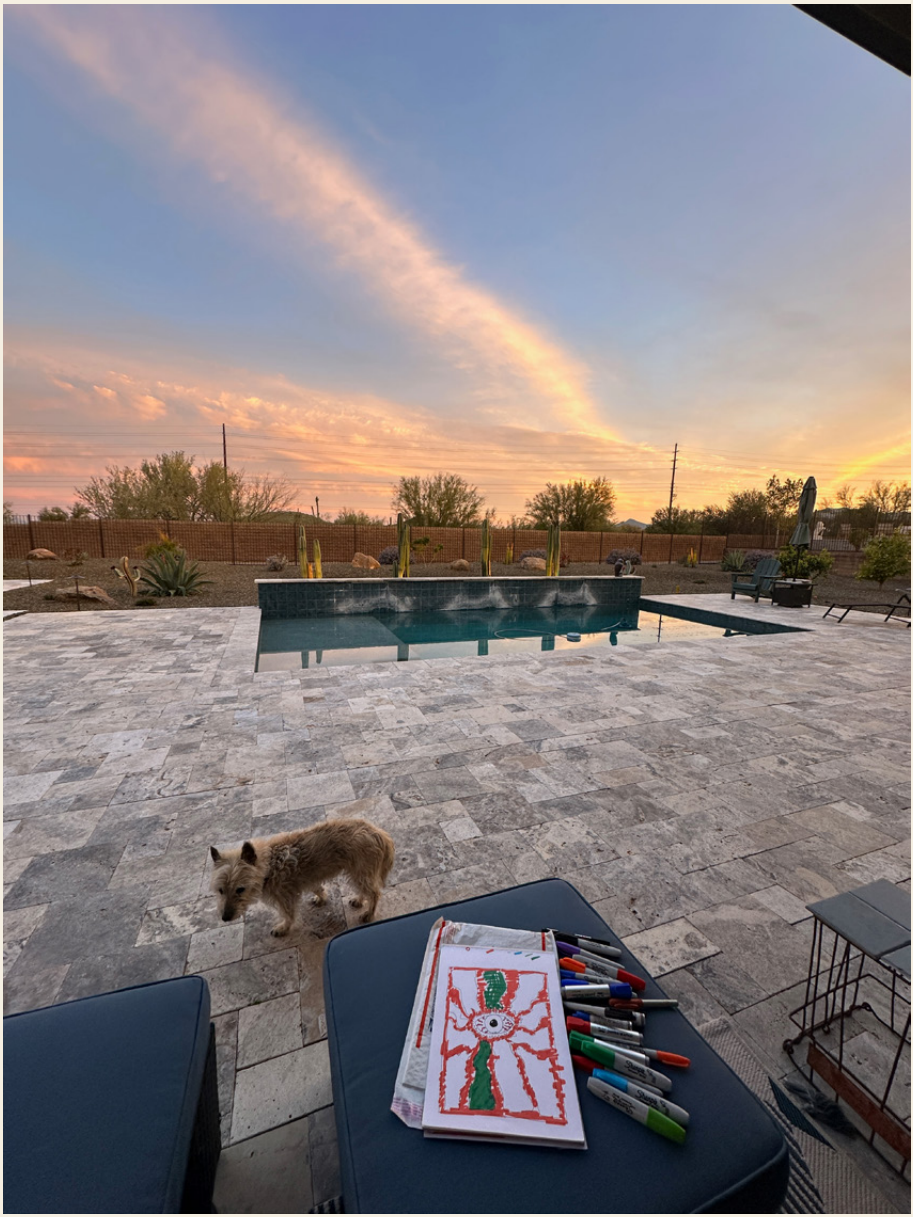

Close, and playful / An arm around each other

Room for one more

A dog at dusk

Under the covers

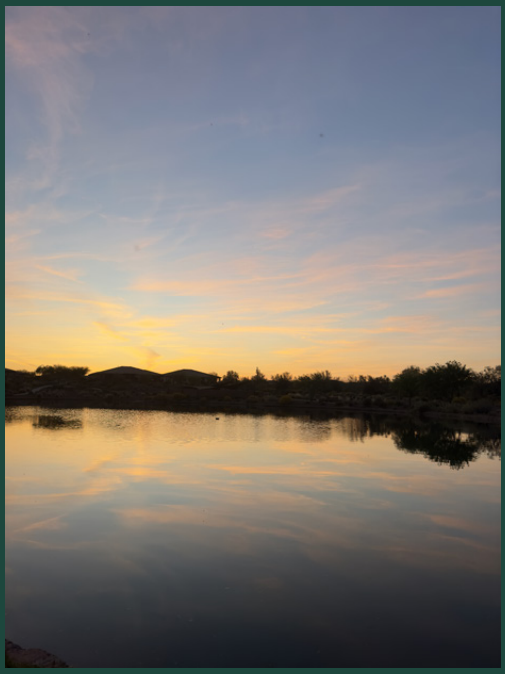

The walk beside the lake

Stay until the color changes

More life ahead.
